About World Rowing

The World Rowing Federation is the governing body of the sport of rowing. It is empowered by its 157 member National Rowing Federations, the National Olympic Committees and the International Olympic Committee, to govern the sport of rowing.

World Rowing was previously called FISA (from the French, Fédération Internationale des Sociétés d’Aviron) with a full name change to World Rowing coming into effect in 2020.

World Rowing sets the rules and regulations for the practice of the sport in all its forms (elite, para rowing, coastal, masters and aspects of indoor). It organises sanctioned World Rowing events including those for under-19 and under-23s. It provides advice and expertise for the organisation of rowing regattas, events, coaching education, rowing development and other matters relating to the sport and its development.

In 2017 World Rowing, as FISA, celebrated its 125th anniversary. It was founded by representatives from Belgium, France, Italy, Switzerland and Adriatica (now a part of Italy) in Turin, Italy on 25 June 1892. It is the oldest international sports federation in the Olympic movement. World Rowing established its first headquarters in Lausanne, Switzerland in 1922 and, after moving away, it returned to Lausanne in February 1996. Lausanne is the home of the International Olympic Committee.

1 Welcome to Mississauga / Toronto

1.1 Welcome from Chair of World Rowing's Indoor Rowing Commission

Welcome to the 2023 World Indoor Rowing Championships presented by Concept2 in Mississauga, Canada.

As one of the most competitive and physically demanding indoor rowing events, I am excited to see the world's top rowers gather in Canada to compete for the title of World Champion.

These Championships have a number of firsts. It's the first to host the Versa Challenge, a new format that will test ten men and ten women on their power, fitness and stamina over five events during the weekend. It's the first Championship that is hybrid, combining the success of our physical Championships before Covid and our Virtual Championships during Covid. We are excited to be combining the two.

Mississauga is a great host city for this event, known for its beautiful lakes and waterways, as well as its strong rowing community. The venue for the championships, The Paramount Fine Foods Centre, will provide an electrifying atmosphere for both athletes and fans alike.

With a first-class reputation and sport hosting history, the Paramount Fine Foods Centre has established itself as a premier event venue in Southern Ontario. Home to the Ontario Hockey League's Mississauga Steelheads and NBA G-League's Raptors 905. The venue's arena floor will be transformed into a world class competition space for the 2023 World Rowing Indoor Championships.

There will be over 1000 rowers from all over the world, showcasing their talent and determination on the indoor rowing machines. Along with the rowers we also welcome their coaches, support staff and, of course, the fans who will be cheering them on.

I would like to thank the organising committee and all the volunteers who have worked tirelessly to bring this event to life. Without their dedication, these championships would not be possible. I would also like to thank the sponsors and partners who have given their support in the delivery of the event.

Wishing you all an exciting and memorable experience at the 2023 World Indoor Rowing Championships. Good luck to all the athletes!

Fil Ljubicic,
Chair of World Rowing's Indoor Rowing Commission

Welcome from Chair, organising committee

Welcome to the World Rowing Indoor Championships (WRICH) and thank you for helping us make history at #RowTheNorth.

WRICH 2023 will be ground-breaking, the first ever hybrid World Rowing Indoor Championships with athletes competing in real time virtually from around the world against hundreds of participants who are joining us on the arena floor.

This is also the first time Canada has ever had the pleasure to host the World Rowing Indoor Championships.

Building upon four decades of annually hosting Canada's Indoor Rowing Championships, we are hoping to help showcase some of the best stories in the indoor rowing world.

We have Olympic Champions, Paralympians, CrossFit stars, participants of all ages, including a 91-year-old world record holder. Our team will try to help you in any way we can to tell these stories.

Please read through the Media Guide so you know how the weekend will run. The Organising Committee Communication Team are very friendly volunteers around the venue look forward to welcoming you, helping you find your way and answering any questions. We are delighted to have the enthusiastic assistance of Centennial College sport's sport journalism students working with us during this event.

We look forward to sharing our collective excitement for indoor rowing at the 2023 World Rowing Indoor Championships.

2 Indoor Rowing

2.1 About indoor rowing

Indoor rowing, or 'erging' (named because of the equipment used for this type of sport – the ergometer), has been widely used as a training tool for rowers since its creation.

Today, indoor rowing has moved from just a training tool to common piece of gym equipment to becoming a competitive sport in its own right.

Ergometers have been used in rowing training since the 1950s in many countries. The earliest examples were huge metal contraptions with a solid iron flywheel.

The 1980s saw the development of lighter, transportable and slightly more rower-friendly machines. Former United States team rowers, the Dreissigacker brothers developed an ergometer using their rowing knowledge and bicycle parts. They went on to found Concept2. This innovation helped to make the rowing machine light and affordable and allowed rowers to compare their performances against one another. Concept2 became the standard.

This helped indoor rowing to grow rapidly for training and for gyms and made indoor rowing competitions possible.

The longest running and best known indoor rowing competition is the C.R.A.S.H-Bs, held every year in February in Boston, USA. In 2018, the first World Rowing Indoor Championships were held in conjunction with Concept2 in Alexandria, USA. Indoor rowing competitions now take place all over the world.

There have been a number of waves that have boosted indoor rowing. One is the growth of CrossFit. This saw indoor rowers used as part of their training and competitions. Then with people forced inside during the Covid-19 Pandemic, indoor rowing boomed along with virtual competitions. Concept2 along with other indoor rowing manufacturers could not keep up with the demand.

Just like on-water rowing, the benchmark test on the ergometer is 2000 metres for time. But competitions have grown to include various race formats. These include races for time, for distance, for maximum wattage, relay and team competitions, blind races and elimination races.

Indoor rowing is also found in other sport competitions, such as CrossFit, Functional Fitness, and 'indoor' triathlon.

Indoor rowing is naturally suited to virtual training and competition, and to eSports. Augmented reality and virtual racing and training platforms are being developed.

The 2021 and 2022 World Rowing Indoor Championships took place virtually. The 2023 World Rowing Indoor Championships is staged as a hybrid (both virtual and in-person) event.

2.2 Indoor rowing race categories

Age and para rowing race categories

The following age and para rowing categories are offered over 2000m and 500m distances. All of the following events are hybrid. This means that competitors can enter to race in-person in Mississauga, Toronto without needing to qualify in advance. Or competitors can enter to race virtually through qualification in advance. In-person and virtual competitors will race against one another, in real time, during the World Rowing Indoor Championships.

Each teammate must row twice and switch every 250m. A rower cannot row two consecutive 250m segments (ie 500m) as they must switch every 250m with another teammate. A teammate must reach the 250m increment before switching and may take no more than 2 additional strokes after the 250m increment before switching.
Men's Team	4 Men
Women's Team	4 Women

2.3 World Rowing Versa Challenge

For the first time since the creation of the World Rowing Indoor Championships (WRICH), the 2023 edition will feature a competition composed of multiple events. Over two days, competitors will race in five different events with the goal to be crowned the World Rowing Versa Champion.

The Versa is an in-person only competition format. Ten men and ten women have qualified in advance to compete in the Versa in Mississauga-Toronto.

The Versa was created to offer competitors a unique competition opportunity which cannot be replicated at home and allows for several race opportunities during one event. It features an element of uncertainty and variability which is exciting for both spectators and competitors and allows indoor rowing competitions to expand beyond more traditional 2000m and 500m racing.

The Versa will test all the skills and strengths required of indoor rowers, exposing them to new and unfamiliar race formats. Competitors may or may not be informed about the race formats in advance of the WRICH so will train to be prepared for any challenge.

The five events of the Versa Challenge will take place amongst the 2000m and 500m age and para category races, which are offered as hybrid (in-person and virtual) events.

3 The best of indoor rowing

3.1 Rowers to watch

Oliver Zeidler (Germany)

He's back! The reigning World Rowing Champion in the men's single sculls will be competing in Toronto. Oliver Zeidler pursued swimming as his initial sporting career with cross training on the Concept2 about once a week. His extraordinary talent on the indoor rower was clear and he knew it, converting to rowing in 2017. Zeidler reputedly pulled a 5:52 in training on his first 2000m test. He went on to become the sixth man under with a 5:38.7 aged just 21 on 7 April 2018. He won the World Rowing Indoor title in 2019, and has not competed since – he is back and will look for nothing less than the gold medal.

Felipe Kluver Ferreira (Uruguay)

For the first time ever, a Uruguayan rower was crowned World Rowing Champion last year. Not only once, but twice! Felipe Kluver Ferreira is the reigning World Rowing Indoor Champion in the lightweight under-23 category – a title that helped him capture, later in the season, a gold medal at the 2022 World Rowing Under 23 Championships in Varese. The expectations are now sky high for Kluver Ferreira, who also made it to the A-Final of the lightweight men's double sculls at the Tokyo 2020 Olympic Games. He will compete in the lightweight men 21-22 years old category.

Birgit Skarstein (Norway)

Skarstein is arguably one of the best para rowers of all time. Unbeaten since 2016, reigning Paralympic champion, five-time World Rowing Champion, World Best Time holder... there's just no stopping Skarstein in the PR1 women's single sculls. She did compete in 2021 at the Virtual Indoor Championships. And guess what? She won the gold medal there too. It is safe to say that she will be the top name to watch in that boat class.

Danielle Kaschula (Zimbabwe)

The next big thing? Danielle Kaschula broke a multitude of Indoor rowing records last year... at the age of 13. She broke the under-14 World Record by going 1:32.8 for 500m and later on she finished 7th overall in the U19 category, competing against rowers four to five years older than her. We are curious to see her development and if she can continue to break records at such a young age.

Jakub Podrazil (Czech Republic)

In 2020, at the European Rowing Indoor Championships, Jakub Podrazil came oh-so-close to the magic 5:40 mark for the 2000m race. His time (5:42.3) shows how strong the Czech rower is on the rowing machine. Although the results aren't as good on the water – he is the anchor of the Czech men's double sculls, that finished 10th at the last World Rowing Championships – Podrazil is a natural on the erg and will certainly be amongst the favorites. He will be competing remotely.

Sonja Peltola (Finland)

Peltola is the perfect example of the rise of indoor rowing in Finland. She is a pure force on the erg having set world records right after the pandemic and since then she hasn't stop competing and winning medals. The most recent example was her presence at the 2023 European Rowing Indoor Championships in Paris where she won a gold medal in the women's 30-39 category over the 500m distance and a silver medal in the relay event. Peltola will be competing from her gym in Finland.

Sydney Payne (Canada)

Two Tokyo 2020 Olympic Champions will be competing at the 2023 World Rowing Indoor Championships. Alongside teammate Kasia Gruchalla-Wesierski, Sydney Payne will be one of the top names to watch. She is one of the anchors of the ever-so successful women's eight that won gold in Tokyo and a bronze medal at the 2022 World Rowing Championships in Czech Republic. She is also one of the most accessible, friendly athletes to be around – a role model for lots of young rowers. And, by the way, one of the fastest on the indoor rowing machine.

Cameron Wharram (Canada)

Phill Clapp vs Cameron Wharram, take two! While the reigning World Champion in the 500m distance, Clapp will be competing from home in the United Kingdom, all eyes will be on the local favorite Cameron Wharram in Toronto. The former powerlifter is one of the best erg sprinters in the world. Last year, he qualified for the Virtual Indoor Championships with a time of 1:11.9, only to lose the race by 0.3 seconds to Clapp. It will be no easy task to beat the three-time reigning World Rowing Indoor Champion – but the energy of the crowd may give just enough energy to Wharram to get to the line first.

Martino Goretti (Italy)

On the startline, there will be few people with more medals attached to their resumé than Martino Goretti. The lightweight rower from Italy is the World Champion in the lightweight men's single sculls from 2019. He also has had great results at the World Rowing Indoor Championships with a silver medal in 2019, a bronze in 2020 and another silver medal at the Virtual Indoor Championships in 2021. Goretti will try to beat the two-time gold medallist in this event, Florian Roller from Germany, who will compete virtually.

Olena Buryak (Ukraine)

The best in the business. Olena Buryak is the best indoor rower on the planet. Whoever has any doubt about it can check her scores and will quickly run out of arguments. She held the World Record for 2000m for a number of years and still holds it in the 30-39 year old age group. She's the World Champion from 2019 and 2020, absent in 2021, she could not compete last year because of the war in her home country. Buryak is back this year and will be competing virtually, from Kiev, Ukraine. She will certainly want to prove that she is still unbeatable on the erg.

Hela Belhaje Mohamed (Tunisia)

"I like rowing, it makes me feel free, especially when there are waves. It feels like an adventure." A gold medallist in 2021 at the World Rowing Beach Sprint Finals, Hela Belhaje Mohamed is embarking on a different kind of adventure with her participation at the World Rowing Indoor Championships. The young rower out of Tunis, Tunisia will try again to prove that she can be a great athlete across all disciplines of Rowing. She finished 8th last year in the Under 19 category for the 2000m event and will look to improve on what was a very encouraging performance.

Giacomo Perini (Italy)

What a debut it was for Giacomo Perini on the international scene last year. The para rower made his debut in the PR1 men's single sculls and managed to win gold at the 2022 World Rowing Cup II and the European Rowing Championships, plus a silver medal at the World Rowing Championships. Perini is now giving it a go at the World Rowing Indoor Championships where he will be the favorite to add a gold medal to his impressive start.

3.2 Rowers in focus

Jason Marshall takes on the World Rowing Versa Challenge

When the ten male athletes face off at the World Rowing Indoor Championships first ever Versa Challenge, Canadian Jason Marshall is hoping to show the world he is up to the challenge.

His resume is a little different than many athletes competing in Mississauga which could set him up well for what's to come. Growing up in British Columbia on Canada's west coast, Marshall and his younger brother found their love for sport came naturally.

"We were known around town as the 'pitbull brothers,'" says Marshall. "We had too much energy. We played pretty much every sport growing up."

When he went to BC's Simon Fraser University, Marshall had aspirations of playing professional football. He was the quarterback at Simon Fraser and had a tryout with the Canadian Football League team in Edmonton after he graduated. He didn't make the cut but was invited to try out for Canada's National Rugby Team. That's where he was first introduced to indoor rowing.

It was far from love at first sight.

"My very first time on a rowing machine was with the Canadian National Team," Marshall remembers. "We were doing fitness challenges. One of the challenges was a 500 metre row. I didn't touch it for three years after that. Then I was in France playing professional rugby. We were doing a spin bike workout and there weren't enough bikes, so the coach said for a few of us to jump on the rower. I hated it."

A year later, dogged by injury, the rowing machine became an essential training tool in Marshall's recovery. Rowing, he soon discovered, was not just for rehabilitation. Marshall then moved to play professional rugby in New Zealand and was surprised at one core element of the training.

"The coach was a huge advocate of using rowing in the fitness regime," he says. "There were benchmarks to hit and workouts to do. That was my first real taste of it."

Marshall started to see improvements in his fitness for rugby and rowing. He wasn't just hitting those rowing benchmarks, he was smashing them.

"I realised I was pretty decent at it," he says. "One of the tests was 2k. I think I rowed a 6:24. I was the fastest on the team, but that was my first attempt. I didn't know how to pace it."

Marshall ended up playing 31 rugby test matches for Canada. He also played parts of five seasons of pro rugby in France.

Then working as a firefighter his passion for indoor rowing really ignited.

"I was at the gym with another firefighter after work," remembers Marshall. "He bet me I couldn't do a 1k in under 3 minutes. I got on and I did it." That was the turning point that got him into the sport.

"I began to do some research and realised there was a whole competitive community out there. I was lucky that there were a few people who reached out to me. A month or two after the bet, I realised that sub 6 minutes for 2k was actually a pretty good time."

With this goal in mind, Marshall's training took off. "I didn't know how difficult it was going to be, but for whatever reason I think rugby just prepared me for the physical battles and mental pain that come with it."

When he got his time below 6 minutes for 2000 metres, he set a new goal and achieved what is still today his personal best. "My fastest 2k is 5:49," he says. "That was my goal, get it under 5:50."

As for the Versa Challenge, "I want to be as competitive as possible," says Marshall. "I'm looking at it as my last push to do something. The field is pretty strong from the guys who have qualified, but I think if I am in my top shape."

Indoor rowing a family affair for Kirsten Kline

When Kirsten Kline was attempting to qualify in November for the World Rowing Versa Challenge she only had time for one try for each of the two required challenges.

“Usually, I like to take several attempts at qualifiers but now I have a baby to play with, so I went hard on both of my first attempts. Let me be clear,” Kline told her Instagram followers, “I sold my soul for these scores.”

The strategy worked. Kline ended up qualifying first overall among the ten women from around the world who will participate in the Versa Challenge.

“I think it is exciting,” she says of the new event. “I’m looking forward to it a lot. We don’t do a lot of different stuff in rowing. People always ask, ‘what’s your 2k?’,” she says of rowing’s traditional race distance of 2000 metres. “I think it would be cool to see what the best in the world do for different distances.”

Kline, already a 2021 and 2022 World Rowing Indoor Champion, has set several indoor world records during her short time in the sport. She is determined to show that now as a mother her athletic drive and goals haven’t changed. In fact, she believes she’s found a way to have better balance.

“Before we had him (our son),” she says of herself and her partner, “we said, OK, we’re not going to give up on our goals. She won’t let me, and I won’t let her give up.”

This has led to opportunities to share what she loves with her son in unique ways. “When he’s up at three in the morning,” says Kline, “he’ll sit and watch rowing with me while I’m training.”

“As he grows up with us, I want him to know, you can do anything. Even if you’ve got all these roadblocks, you can do it if you keep trying. I believe that it’s not just with rowing, but with anything. If you don’t quit, you don’t fail.”

When Kline discovered indoor rowing, she says it helped her get her life back on track. “I wasn’t a fan of where my life was,” she says. “I was drinking a lot.”

The decision to join a CrossFit gym proved life changing, especially when Kline found something that she seemed to be good at: indoor rowing.

“I won a local competition at the gym,” she continues, recalling how something in her changed. That feeling grew as she looked at the logbook on Concept2’s website where people from all around the world post their indoor rowing results.

“It lit a fire in me. Being somewhat OK at something in my life. I ran with it. When I stopped drinking, I needed something to fill that void and I found rowing. It has taught me about patience and hard work. It is a journey I never thought would happen when I started rowing. Rowing has been a saving grace.”

3.3 What happened at the 2022 World Rowing Indoor Championships

Scheduled to be held in Hamburg, Germany the 2022 World Rowing Indoor Championships went completely virtual due to the Covid-19 pandemic. This meant that anyone, anywhere in the world could compete as long as they had access to a Concept2 indoor rowing machine.

Competitors from around the world had to work in differing time zones to be part of their chosen race or races with a video link connecting the competitors and a live stream enabling everyone anywhere to watch the race. People rowed in garages, balconies, kitchens, at gyms and rowing clubs – anywhere that was possible.

World Records were broken across age groups and distances. To list a few Richard Stout of Canada set the record in the men's 70-74 2000m category going 6:50.2. Fellow Canadian Alida Kingswood set the women's 90-94 2000m in a time of 10:29.3. This bettered the previous record by over two minutes. The oldest rower on the day, Dean Smith of the United States set a record of 10:14.5 in the men's 95-99 2000m.

In the under-23 women's 2000m on-water rower and age group world champion, Alexandra Foester from Germany won by a huge margin in a time of 6:41.6. For the under-23 men, Isaiah Harrison of the United States took the victory. Harrison owns a number of age group world records.

China performed a clean sweep in the lightweight women's 2000m category. The top three spots went to Min Yang, Jiaqui Zou and Lai Weijuan. Yang's winning time was 7:06.9. The Chinese also performed a clean sweep in the open (heavyweight) women's 2000m. Zhang Peixin became the world champion, followed by Lv Yang and Xu Xingye. A bronze medal was also awarded to the former world champion, Olena Buryak of Ukraine who was unable to race due to the security situation. Buryak's qualifying time won her the bronze.

Buryak also took a silver medal for her qualifying time in the open women's 500m. She was the favourite to win but in her absence Bianca Piloseno of the United States won.

The open men's 2000m was highly anticipated with Ward Lemmelijn of Belgium the favourite leading into the final. Lemmelijn had a large supporting crowd as he overtook Russia's Alexander Vyazovkin in the close of the race to win in a time of 5:41.7. Third went to Finland's Joel Naukkarinen.

The PR1 men's category had a very close battle between Shmuel Daniel of Israel and Javier Reja Munoz of Spain. Tokyo Paralympian Reja Munoz pulled off the win in a new world record time of 7:23.2.

World record holder in the open men's 500m, Phil Clapp of Great Britain went into the race as favourite. Clapp held off a late surge from Cameron Wharram of Canada to get the title in a time of 1:11.6. Anton Grassl from Slovakia finished third. Half an hour later Grassl won gold in the men's 40-49 500m category.

A tie occurred in the 40-49 women's 500m with Henrietta Hoegberg of Sweden and Arabella Carbutt of Great Britain recording identical times of 1:32.5. Then in the same race the bronze medal was tied between Lene Biesland of Norway and Morgan McGrath of the United States.

5 World Records

5.1 How to get an indoor rowing world record

Well to start off with you have to be perhaps a little crazy and definitely have a well-developed sense of humour. But in all seriousness, like any world record, it's really, really hard. The only (small) concession is that there's lots of world records to go after.

World records can be set in a range of distances from 100m through to the marathon and ultra distances. They can also be set by time, age groups and weight (heavyweight and lightweight). There's para rowing (called adaptive by Concept2) world records, American records and records on not just the static indoor rower but on slides and the dynamic indoor rower.

The standard, though, is the 2000m static category. This became the standard in 1996 emulating the Olympic distance of an on-water rowing race. The overall record in this category is currently held by Josh Dunkley-Smith of Australia. He set the record of 5:35.8 in 2018 and is one of only a few indoor rowers to go under 5:40. Before Dunkley-Smith the record was held by New Zealand's Rob Waddell who still holds the 30 – 39 year old 2000m record of 5:36.6 set in 2008.

On the women's side Brooke Mooney of the United States went 6:21.1 in 2021. Prior to Mooney, Olena Buryak of Ukraine held the record. Like Waddell, Buryak has the 30–39-year-old record with a time of 6:25.6 (set in 2019). Few other female athletes have broken 5:30.

The age groups go from 12 years old and under through to 100+ with John Hodgson of Great Britain holding the oldest category. In 2011 Hodgson set 13:32.6 as a one-hundred-year-old. Dottie Stewart of the United States is the oldest women's record. In 2018 at the age of 96 she set the record at 14:23.1.

Concept2, the makers of rowing ergometers, track, verify and record all indoor rowing records in a database on their website <https://www.concept2.com/indoor-rowers/racing/records/individual-record-requirements>.

Concept2 sets the criteria for setting a World Record and these can be found on their website <https://www.concept2.com/indoor-rowers/racing/records>. This specifies gender, age, weight category and also para rowing classifications and the rules for verifying the results. It is worth noting that recording of the record runs by season. This season runs from May 1 to April 30. So a record set on May 2, 2022 would count in the 2023 season.

The Covid-19 pandemic saw a boom in World Records being set. With more people exercising from home and competitions going virtual, the indoor rowing machine increased exponentially in usage. In the early stages of the pandemic, in 2020 an incredible 131 new indoor world records were set. This continued to grow through 2020 and 2021 reaching 477 new records. The majority of these records were set in the less-common categories (those outside of the 2000m distance), while the 2000m records remained.

There are now hundreds of indoor rowing competitions around the world both virtually and in-person. The 2000m distance is predominantly the main race but many other distances and classifications have been incorporated including team / relay events. This has developed out of the roots of the sport which go back to 1981 when Concept2 developed the first indoor rowing machine.

5.2 World records for 500m and 2000m

In accordance with the Concept2 world record requirements, all the 2000 meter records listed below were rowed at a Concept2 sanctioned indoor rowing event with witnesses present and without the use of Slides. These are records as of 15 January 2023.
